American History

A trip to the Smithsonian isn't necessary to experience American history or travel back to the early days of aviation. You can explore fascinating museums and historic sites right here in Baltimore County.

▶ Hampton National Historic Site

The Hampton National Historic Site, part of the National Park Service, features a Georgian mansion, historic farm and beautifully landscaped grounds. The mansion, when completed in 1790, was one of the largest homes in the United States and owned for more than 150 years by the Ridgelys, a prominent Maryland family. Today, some 20 buildings and 40,000 artifacts remain to tell the stories of the lives and culture of the diverse people of Hampton—hired industrial and farm workers, enslaved African Americans, indentured servants and the estate's owners. nps.gov/hamp

Top - Fire Museum of Maryland, Lutherville; Bottom - Benjamin Banneker Historical Park and Museum, Catonsville

▶ Benjamin Banneker Historical Park and Museum

The Benjamin Banneker Historical Park and Museum preserves the legacy of the first African American man of science. Benjamin Banneker (1731–1806) was a self-taught mathematician and astronomer who helped survey the boundary for Washington, D.C. This national landmark site was the farmstead of the Banneker family. Today, a museum, gift shop, patio garden, nature trails, and a restored 19th century replica of Banneker's log cabin is on the site.
baltimorecountymd.gov/departments/recreation

▶ Fire Museum of Maryland

Considered one of the finest museums of its kind in the United States, the Fire Museum of Maryland in Lutherville, features displays of more than 50 fire fighting rigs spanning from 1806 to 1957. As an educational institution, the Fire Museum offers a variety of special events for children, firefighters and adults that introduce visitors to the history of firefighting, antique fire apparatus and related memorabilia.

▶ Glenn L. Martin Maryland Aviation Museum

At the Glenn L. Martin Maryland Aviation Museum, located at Martin State Airport, one can explore aviation and aerospace history. The museum chronicles the accomplishments of Glenn L. Martin, whose Middle River plant manufactured World War II bombers. A big draw is the museum's display of historic aircraft, including fighter jets, bombers, reconnaissance planes and airliners.

Diggs-Johnson Museum, Woodstock; Simmons Museum of Negro Leagues Baseball, Owings Mills

▶ Hubert V. Simmons Museum of Negro Leagues Baseball

The Hubert V. Simmons Museum is located in the Owings Mills branch of the Baltimore County Public Library. Exhibits and displays of photographs, artifacts, and memorabilia of both Maryland and U.S. Negro Leagues as well as the newest museum addition, the House of David exhibit, are showcased on the library's four floors. The Museum is named for "Bert" Simmons, who played for the legendary Baltimore Elite Giants in the 1950s.
smnlbinc.org

▶ Diggs-Johnson Museum of African American History

The Museum resides on a plot of land in Granite where freed slaves built a church in the 1860s, most likely as a small log cabin. Eventually, it was on these grounds that the Cherry Hill A.U.M.P Church was built in 1887. The little church remained active until the early 1970s. In 2001, Louis Diggs and Lenwood Johnson began the process of saving this little historical African American church. Renovation and conversion of the church to a museum was completed in 2014. It currently houses artifacts, photographs, and displays of African American life and history in Baltimore County.

War of 1812 Historic Sites in Baltimore County

Many are familiar with the naval bombardment of Fort McHenry and the writing of our national anthem in 1814, but few know of the British land attack in southeast Baltimore County at the Battle of North Point. Sites from that battle are destinations on the Star-Spangled Banner National Historic Trail. Todd's Inheritance Historic Site and the battlefield, both on North Point Road, were pivotal to the defense of Baltimore in 1814. Battle Acre, a one-acre plot on North Point Road, is dedicated to those who fought. The second oldest known military monument in Maryland and the third in the United States stands on Old North Point Road. It honors Private Aquila Randall, who was killed in a skirmish on September 12, 1814.

Historical Society of Baltimore County
